

Irish Summer 2020 Lock-In Philosophy Work-In-Progress Series

Hosted by:

Irish Philosophical Society
and
Trinity Centre for Justice and Values

Venue Online, Microsoft Teams

Time 3.30-4.30 pm

Chair/Organizers

Cara Nine, Philosophy, UCC, President of Irish Philosophical Society

Adina Preda, Philosophy, TCD, Director of Trinity Centre for Justice and Values

To participate, please email Cara at c.nine@ucc.ie

Dates and Speakers

July 1	Sean Power, University College Cork Prudence, Ethics, and Imagining the Future (a WIP about rationality and the philosophy of time) Sean Enda Power is a research affiliate of Philosophy at University College Cork, a former IRC postdoctoral fellow, and a former visiting fellow to the Centre for Time at University of Sydney. His research is in the philosophy of time and its relationship to experience. His works include Philosophy of Time and Perceptual Experience (Routledge 2018), Philosophy of Time: A Contemporary Introduction (Routledge, forthcoming), and several papers. He is also guest-editor of a Journal of Consciousness Studies special issue on time consciousness (2017) and co-edited (with Arstila, Bardon, and Vatakis) an interdisciplinary anthology on temporal illusions (Palgrave, 2019).
July 15	Felix Ó Murchadha, NUI Galway Being a Self: Narrative, Love and Community Felix Ó Murchadha is a Professor of Philosophy at the National University of Ireland, Galway and former Head of School of Humanities at NUIG. A former

	Fulbright Scholar, he has published articles, papers, books and book chapters in the area of Phenomenology with specific emphasis on questions of Religion, Time, Violence and the Self and is the author of three monographs and editor of one collection, including The Time of Revolution: Kairos and Chronos in Heidegger (Bloomsbury, 2013), A Phenomenology of Christian Life: Glory and Night (Indiana University Press, 2013).
July 29	Pietro Intropi, Trinity College Dublin Freedom's Values: The Good and the Right Pietro Intropi is a Research Fellow in Philosophy at Trinity College Dublin. He studied at Oxford (DPhil in Politics), where he was a Clarendon Scholar and Lecturer in Politics at St. Anne's College. Pietro's research is in contemporary political philosophy, and he is working on a series of papers on the value of freedom and respect for persons in a theory of justice. Pietro's new project is on the value of reciprocity in a left-libertarian theory of justice.
August 12	Brian Carey, Trinity College Dublin Hypocrisy as Epistemic Injustice Brian Carey is a Teaching Fellow in the Philosophy Department at Trinity College Dublin. His research interests concern questions in contemporary political and moral philosophy relating to distributive justice in non-ideal theory, with a particular focus on issues involving language, communication and public deliberation in non-ideal circumstances.
August 26	Peter Stone, Trinity College Dublin Ideal Theory, True and False Peter Stone is an Associate Professor of Political Science at Trinity College Dublin. He is the author of The Luck of the Draw: The Role of Lotteries in Decision Making (Oxford University Press, 2011) and the editor of 3 books, including Lotteries in Public Life: A Reader (Imprint Academic, 2011). His research deals with theories of justice, democratic theory, rational choice theory, and the philosophy of the social sciences. He is currently serving as President of the Political Studies Association of Ireland (PSAI) and as co-convenor of the PSAI Political Theory Specialist Group.
September 9	Valeria Venditti, University College Cork Killjoys, Furies and Laughters. Women's anger as an affirmative political tool Valeria Venditti is an IRC post-doctoral fellow at the University College Cork, Department of Philosophy. She has largely researched on LGBT rights, motherhood, reproductive technologies and alternative familial ties. As a side-project, she is researching the political value of everyday utopias, intentional communities and artistic projects/public performances. In 2019, Routledge published her first monograph, The Law and Politics of Inclusion.

	From Rights to Practices of Disidentification. She collaborates with artists and performers to voice their practices.
September 23	Kenneth Silver, Trinity College Dublin Markets within the Limits of Feasibility Kenneth Silver is an Assistant Professor in Business Ethics at Trinity College Dublin within the Trinity Business School. With a doctorate in Philosophy, his work is centred primarily within business ethics, but he also researches on a range of cross-disciplinary topics including corporate personhood, the nature of action and causation, financial ethics, and strategic management.